

FACTS
What does Rogue Credit Union do with your personal information?
Why?

Rogue Credit Union like all financial service companies collects relevant information about members that is needed to establish and maintain your account and services. Federal law gives consumers the right to limit some but not all sharing. Federal law also requires us to inform you as to how we collect, share, and protect your personal information. Please read this notice carefully to understand what we do here at Rogue Credit Union with your information.

What?

In order to provide financial services to you such as servicing your account, processing transactions, check services, ATM access, and other payment and loan processing services we share certain information about you with our affiliates. However, we only share information to the extent necessary to service your account or offer relative services to you in hopes of providing a better banking experience. The types of personal information we collect and share depend on the accounts or services you have with us.

This information can include:

- Social Security number and income
- Account balances and transaction history
- Credit history and credit scores

When you are no longer our member, we will not share your information except as permitted or required by law as described in this notice.

How?

All financial companies need to share members' personal information to run their everyday business. In the section below, we list the reasons financial companies can share members' personal information; the reasons Rogue Credit Union chooses to share; and whether you can limit this type of sharing.
